

Do the Right Things Right

There is no denying that no life would be completed without some regretful things. However, there is another truth that no one would like to frequently deal with these things, including wasting life, losing important relationship, or simply summarizing them: not to do the right things right.

In order to do the right things right, we need to exactly know the definition of "right" first. R-I-G-H-T, the original meaning of this word, according to the dictionary, is the idea accepted by our mind. After putting two of the same words in a sentence, we get the concept of choosing what most people don't consider to be bad and doing it in a proper way.

"Do it!" After assuming that most human beings don't like to do anything wrong or in a wrong way, I consider "Do it" to be the best answer to the question "How to do the right things right?" In fact, once a person decides to have something right be done, he or she might not want to ruin everything. Besides, with this state of mind and some diligence, it is easy to make any task progresses smoothly and successfully. Thus, what we are in lack of is just the determination of doing it.

Maybe there is still a doubt about how to choose the right things. Actually, it isn't as tough as most people think, and it is exactly a feeling--This is good to me and the people around me. Therefore, if someday we have this kind of feeling and the condition permits, why not give it a try and start to enjoy the sense of achievement coming from "Do the Right Things Right."
